INTRODUCTION

It would appear that the Dally, or Dalley, family is of ancient French origin. In the "Dictionnaire de la Noblesse" by D. de Mailhol, it is stated that the house of d'Ailly is of the most illustrious and ancient in Picardy, and that the family was known there as far back as 1090. It also states that the d'Aillys, starting in 1343, possessed the lands of Pequigny, now Picquigny), and the title of "Vidame d'Amiens" and that the main branch of the family died out in 1620. It is also mentioned that the d'Ailhaud family is a cadet house of the d'Ailly family.

In the great French dictionary, "La Petit Larousse" it is stated that the family of d'Ailly was a Protestant house of Picardy which derived its origin from Robert d'Ailly who lived in 1090. Mention is also made of the fact that d'Aillys took an active part in the religious wars of France, several members fighting in the Battle of St. Denis, in the ranks of the Huguenots. This dictionary also states that there exists the ruins of a chateau of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, probably the ancestral home of the d'Aillys, built when they acquired possession of the Picquigny lands. It was reduced to ruins in the sixteenth century, apparently because of the conversion of the family to the Huguenot cause.

It is significant that the arms of the English Dallys shows the fleur-de-lis of France. These are described as follows: Arms: Ard. three crosses crosslet fitches in pale, sa, between two pellets, on a chief gules, a fleur-de-lis as.: Crest: a demi-angel issuing, holding a griffin head erased ppr.

There are numerous references to John Dally in the "Calendar of New York Historical Manuscripts", from April 1644 to December 1645. One of these states that he was from Bristol. From another source we find that a Richard Dalley, age 18, together with Robert Seaward, age 23, embarked in the "Thomas & John" for Virginia on January 6, 1635. This is the only mention that can be found of Richard Dally.

Bristol was a thriving port with important trade relations with America. It is in the southwest of England, the section to which many of the Huguenot families fled as a result of their persecution in France. It is quite evident that John Dally was born in one of the southern English counties, with Bristol not necessarily being the place of birth, but the port of departure from England. Many of the family were in and about the city of Exeter in Devonshire early in the seventeenth century. Others were in Dorset, Hampshire and Surrey as early as 1550.

In 1550 a William Dalley of Beddington, Surrey, married Joan Richbell. In 1646, in New York, John Dally had a partner in the slave trade, John Richbell, a well to do Southampton merchant, later proprietor of Mamaroneck, New York. There is a possibility that Dally and Richbell were related.

John Dally was undoubtedly primarily a mariner, either an officer on one of the ships of the West Indies Company, or the master of a ship chartered from that company. On April 12, 1645, he stated that he had bought the West Indies ship "St. Peter", which had been confiscated for smuggling powder and other commodities. He also stated at the time that he had been in New Amsterdam as early as 1644. About two years later he was sued by the crew of the "Tamandare" for non-payment of wages and he claimed that they had not performed their work according to agreement. Decision was given for the plaintiffs. On three or four occasions he was party to suits involving ships, freights, payment of duties and other maritime matters, all indicative of his calling as a sea captain who traveled up and down the Atlantic coast.

After 1648 his name no longer appears in the records of New Amsterdam, but several years later appears in the records of Northampton County, Virginia. He undoubtedly married about this time for his son, John, was taxed in 1666 as being in the group that were sixteen years old or older. As a non-Puritan and a Royalist, with fifteen others, he was obliged to sign a pledge of obedience to the Parliament in 1681. Later, with others, he was indicted for carrying on an unlawful war against the Indians, but all were released.

About 1663 John Dally appeared on the Island of Monhagen, off the coast of Maine, where he continued to live for about twenty-one years, except for comparative short intervals. In 1676, for example, together with others of the population, he was driven out by the Indians. He was the owner of considerable property, both on the island and on the mainland. During some fifteen years he served as a Justice of the Peace, Constable, Sergeant of Militia, tavern keeper, farmer, fisherman, trader, etc. Being again driven from his home by the Indians, he moved to Staten Island, New York, in 1689.

In 1691 he was a member of the New York Assembly. During 1676 and 1677, when he had been driven out of his Monhagen home by the Indians, he is recorded as being a farmer on Staten Island and is so recorded as late as February 1677.

His age at death is purely a matter of conjecture, perhaps somewhere between seventy and eighty. Apparently he was a man of more than ordinary education and until late in life the possessor of considerable means. Unfortunately for him, the bulk of his property was either destroyed or rendered useless by the Indians in Maine, for at the time of his death his estate was valued at but thirty-four pounds. He died in 1691, leaving a widow whose name is unknown. For some unknown reason her name was erased from the records now in the Surrogate's office in the Hall of Records in New York. She waived her rights to act as administrator of his estate in favor of Nicholas Bayard, who was John Dally's principal creditor.

Few traces of the family can be found in England prior to 1526. By 1550 the family appeared in several counties, previously mentioned. It was about 1525 that the religious troubles started in France and it was apparently sometime between 1525 and 1550 that the family moved to England. The original home of the family was probably at Ailly-en-Ponthieu, a few miles from Abbeville, and not far from Picquigny, northwest of Amiens. Curiously enough, some of the fifteenth and sixteenth century signatures appear as Dally. In America, two spellings of the name are in use, Dally and Dalley.

That which follows is not to be construed as a complete genealogy of the Dally-Dalley family. Instead it comprises data pertaining to the family which the compiler has gathered from vital and church records, genealogies and genealogical publications, histories, encyclopedias, directories and other sources of a similar nature. The information has been secured in many public and private libraries throughout the country.

Considerable time has been expended in accumulating the data here presented and it is intended that this manuscript be used for reference purposes. The compiler will, at all times, be only too glad to hear from members of the family, to receive additional information and also correction of any errors which may have crept in this presentation. Should any member of the family feel inclined to carry on the work here started, tending to the completion of a real Dally-Dalley Genealogy, this data is freely available and the compiler will assist in such an undertaking to the best of his ability. It seems only proper with well over a thousand old American families having had their family histories published, that this family be also included in the increasing number.

1 - John DALLY, to whom reference has been made in the preceding pages, was in New Amsterdam as early as 1644 and died in New York in 1691 at an age estimated between seventy and eighty. Most of his descendants today seem to be found in New Jersey. It is believed that he had a sister in New Amsterdam and record can be found of two sons, John and Nathaniel Dally. Attention is called to the fact that a Richard Dally, at the age of 18, embarked at Bristol, in the ship "Thomas & John" for Virginia, on January 6, 1635, making his birth year approximately 1616. It is barely likely that he was brother of John Dally who testified that he was in New Amsterdam in 1644. No further record of Richard can be found and it will be noted that John Dally was in Virginia shortly after 1648 and in 1666 his son John Dally was at least sixteen years old, living in Northampton County, Va., the southern most Virginian county on the Delmarva peninsula, somewhere above Cape Charles.

It is quite likely that there are descendants of John Dally in the thirteenth and fourteenth, and even fifteenth generations. For example, Maud Adams, the actress, born Maude Eloise Kiskadden, November 11, 1872, is of the twelfth generation through John Banker. Incidentally, the number of generations of the Dallys from the Obee line are the same as from the Dally line.
